Zach Daniel is part of the corporate practice group of Zimmerman Kiser Sutcliffe, focusing on transactional matters including commercial contracting, intellectual property, strategic business planning, risk management, corporate formation, mergers, acquisitions, employment law and advising on other general corporate and commercial activities. Zach has a broad range of experience representing companies of many sizes from a variety of industries, including large high profile private corporations, well-established family owned organizations and small but emerging businesses.

Zach's corporate practice draws on prior experience in defense litigation, as well as extensive time spent as in-house corporate counsel representing companies in the entertainment/sports, manufacturing and nonprofit industries, including over 6 years representing the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, Inc. (NASCAR). As in-house counsel, Zach has developed extensive skills offering practical, efficient and goal-oriented representation of his clients, allowing them to streamline their industry-specific business needs and decisions in a comprehensive, risk sensitive and timely manner.
